HEALTH UPDATE

Fight Winter Colds and Flu

Fruits and Veggies are Important for a Strong Immune System

You've probably been told, since you were a child, to "eat your fruits and vegetables." According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), it's especially great advice this winter, when good nutrition can help your body's immune system fight off cold and flu germs.

Fruits and vegetables contain essential vitamins, minerals and fiber that may help protect you from chronic diseases. Compared with people who consume a diet with only small amounts of fruits and vegetables, those who eat more generous amounts, and a wider variety, are likely to have reduced risk of chronic diseases. This includes stroke and perhaps other cardiovascular diseases and certain cancers, according to the CDC — not to mention colds and flu.

To get a healthy variety, think color. Eating fruits and vegetables of different colors gives your body a wide range of valuable nutrients, such as folate, potassium and vitamins A and C. Some examples include green spinach, orange sweet potatoes, black beans, yellow corn, purple plums, red watermelon and white onions. For better health this winter, be sure to try new fruits and vegetables regularly.
